To Whom It May Concern;

I have been building large, high end, custom homes in the Park City and Salt Lake City market for the past 3 decades. We have had several projects that were of log construction during that period. It has been a real learning experience for me. Unfortunately, I met Kevin Malon only 3 years ago. His expertise in this type of building would have made life much easier, previously. I am convinced he is the foremost authority in log construction. His empirical knowledge is unsurpassed. He understands the design and engineering phase as well as architectural details that are very pleasing. He is an experienced contractor who has a broad understanding of the entire building process in all styles of construction. It has been a pleasure working with him on the Dave Checketts project in Woodland, Utah. Kevin has high ethical standards in all our arrangements and I feel we received a great value in our contract together. I would highly recommend him in any projects in which you might be considering him.

Sincerely,

Mark B. Chamberlain, President
